Why This Oil Dip Is About To End

by DR. KENT MOORS | MARCH 25, 2017

Dear Oil & Energy Investor,

In the energy world, everyone is still talking about nothing but the dip in oil prices from two weeks, and how - allegedly - increasing U.S. oil production is to blame.

Too bad it's not true.

According to my calculations, only about 4% of the price movement is accounted for by U.S. production.

Some so-called "experts" - many of whom have never even set foot on an oil field, not to mention smelled the oil - point to the rising number of wells being drilled by American shale producers as "proof."

But if they kept reading, they would notice that while it is true that wells are being drilled at the highest rate in the last 18 months...

The number of new wells that are left uncompleted is also at record highs.

In other words, all this drilling activity is not going to translate into higher oil supply any time soon.

So ignore the noise from the mainstream financial media and their "experts." The numbers tell a different story.

Global oil demand is rising...

U.S. oil supply is not rising nearly as fast as the doom-mongers would have you believe...

And most importantly, this recent oil dip is a perfect opportunity for you to snap up energy shares - in oil and other fuels - on the cheap.

In fact, there is one particular fuel that could soon become the number one energy source on the planet. Already, the Department of Defense has invested $7 billion - in a single day.

And projections put the total investment this sector could soon see at $48 trillion.

BW: This is an audio report, likely very long, far too long for me to listen to in order to get the message or conclusion. And the message often tends to be a "commercial". However, if you wish to listen, it is your choice.

Sincerely,

Kent
