The article, starting on the next page, is entitled: “A Daily View Of Commodities”

Biiwii.com was created in mid-2000 solely as a way to help get the message out about deeply-rooted problems about too much debt and leverage within the financial system. The concerns were confirmed and the message proved justified 3 to 4 years later as the system began to purge these distortions, resulting in a climactic washout extending from October, 2008 to March, 2009.

Along the way, a geek-like interest in technical analysis, a long-time interest in human psychology, and various unique macro market ratio indicators were added to the mix, with the result being a financial market newsletter (and dynamic interim updates), Notes From The Rabbit Hole (NFTRH) that combines these attributes to provide a service that is engaged and successful in all market environments by employing risk management first, and opportunity for speculation second.

A Daily View Of Commodities

By Gary Tanashian (bio at the end of the article)

April 5, 2017

We anticipated a bounce in Commodities and here it is, on cue.

Emphasis on the word 'bounce'.

We have got CRB to 187-189, if it is to be just a bounce.

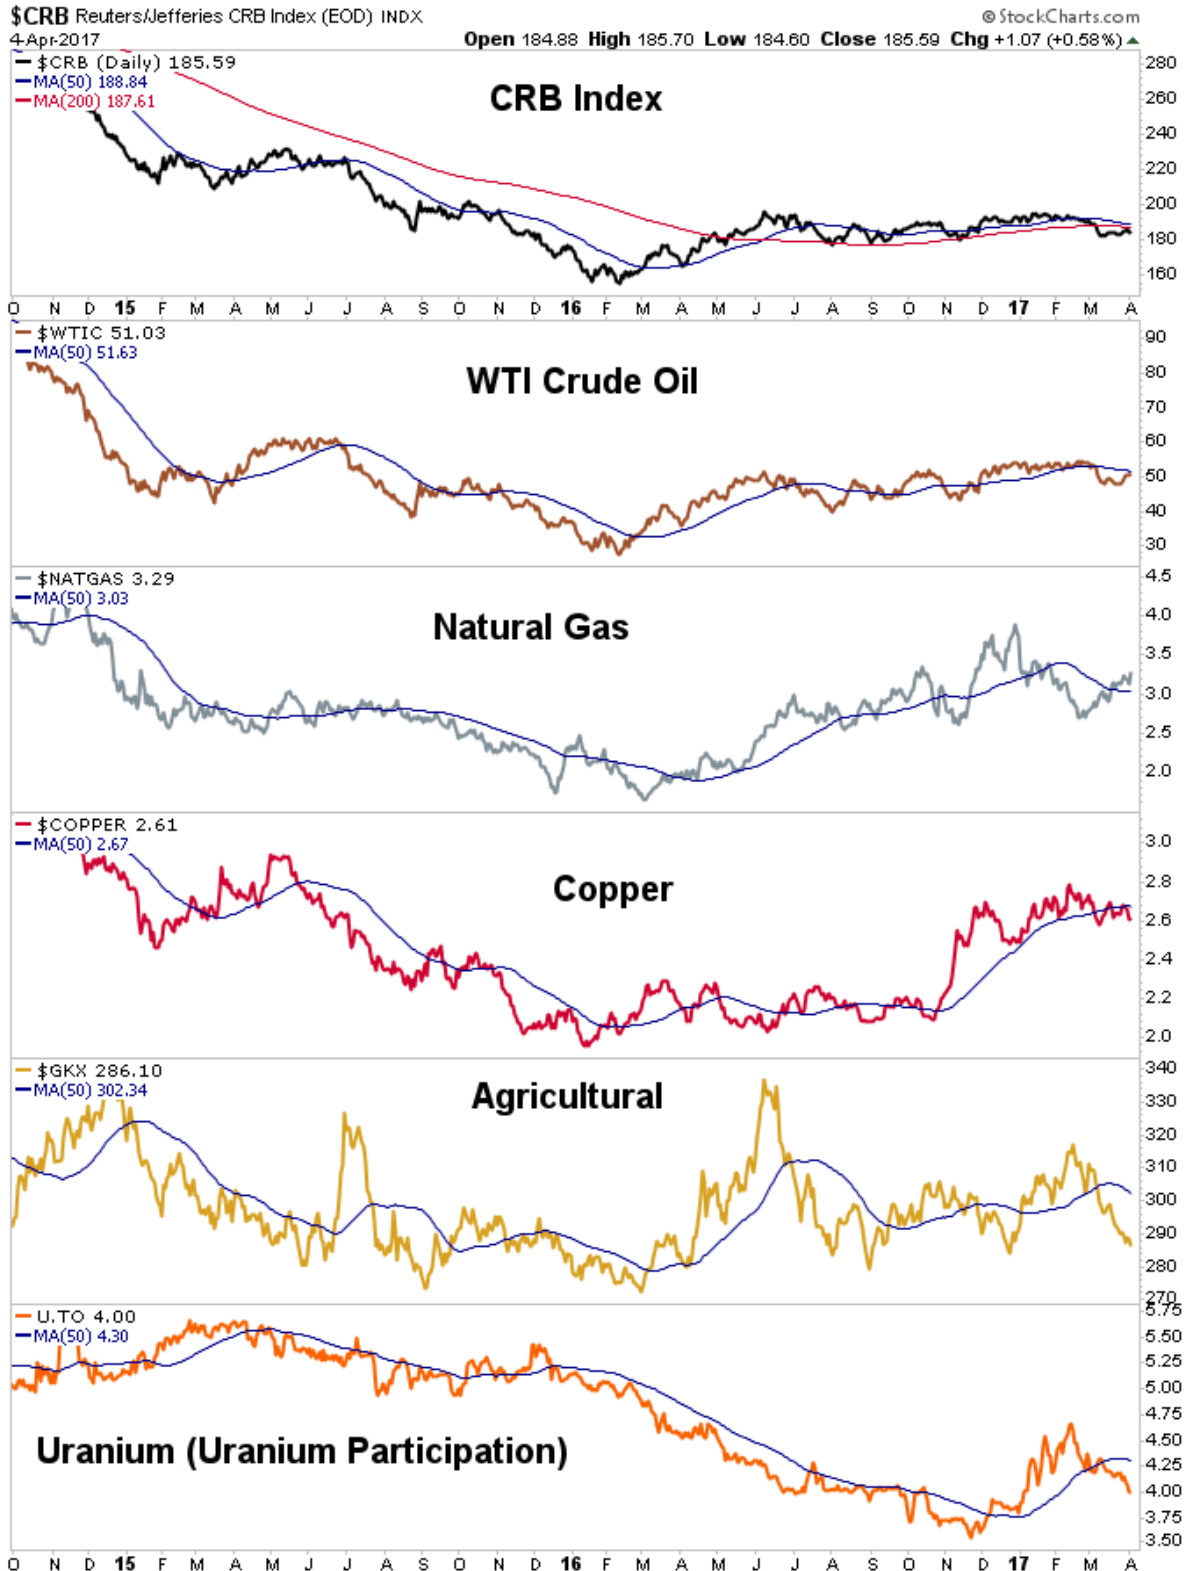

Oil is, unsurprisingly, similar to CRB.

The rest of the suspects are bouncing (NatGas), looking toppy (Copper), or burrowing southward (Uranium had a lot of excessive speculation to burn off).

Notes From The Rabbit Hole

As for some of the resources and materials to make America great again, the best is SQM (the only stock of its kind on which I am long), I assume, due to its solid quarterly and its Lithium production. XLB is stable but uninspiring and everybody else is suspect.

Finally, here is a look at Palladium and its sickly big brother, Platinum. Thing 1 grinds upward in a robo-trend, and Thing 2 is floundering interminably.
